Thales is a leading international technology group providing defence, protection and security solutions based on information and communications technologies. With around 65.000 employees in more than 56 countries, Thales plays a pioneering role internationally in the fields of defence, security, transport and aerospace. Ditzingen-based Thales Germany is the third-largest country organisation within the Thales group. Established in Germany for over a century, Thales Germany is regarded as an integrated German electronics company and systems house in the German engineering tradition. Thales Germany offers its domestic and international customers ultra-modern, highly secure communication, information and control systems along with services to support secure land, air and sea transport. In addition, Thales Germany manufactures and develops satellite components. The company chose energy-efficient water heaters by CLAGE as the interior fittings for its Ditzingen location.
